The first thaw of the season is now with us. But it came the wrong end of the year.

The democratic party will never be able to drive a golden spike. But it has driven a good many nails in its political coffin.

The mills of the gods have in hand the democratic party of Ohio. They will make a pretty neat job of the grinding.

All that Chicago wants to make it the greatest city on earth, is a little Jersey justice, to march along with his gigantic business schemes and matchless enterprise.

Governor Butler having appointed a negro lawyer to a judgeship in Charlestow, has surprised his democratic friends as well as his republican enemies. As is said, "it is a sort of between the devil and deep sea situation, into which it was probably never suspected that Butler would be able to drive his opponents."

Janson, McClurg & Co., Chicago, have in press a brilliant book of Brazilian travels which is entirely unlike any now before the public. Its author, Mr. Frank D. Y. Carpenter, a graduate of Cornell university in 1873, held for several years the position of geographer of the Geological survey of Brazil, and under these peculiarly favorable conditions he acquired the material which, returning to America, he has made the basis of his book. Valuable as is the work for its information, it owes still more to its literary treatment. The author's studies of Brazilian life and manners, and his method of presenting them are unique, and his book occupies a place quite its own among works of travel. It has but little of dry narration and sober details of general information; and yet, with all its vivacity and variety, it is doubtful if there is anywhere to be found so good a picture of life and scenes in and about the great metropolis of the Southern Hemisphere—Rio de Janeiro. The tone of the book, in treating of social life and customs, is pleasantly cynical, yet the author's good nature is apparent throughout. The observations and descriptions of the most interesting features of Brazilian flora and fauna are those of the trained naturalist, and are given with an imaginative faculty which selects only characteristic features, avoiding dry and wearisome details; while the thin veil of fiction thrown around the pictures adds a decided charm to the narrative. The author's growing popularity as a magazine writer, and the decided merits of the book, promise for it an exceptional success.

THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.
The annual election of officers of the state agricultural society took place at Madison on Thursday evening. The re-election of Mr. N. D. Pratt as president of the society, will call out a hearty endorsement from farmers and manufacturers in all parts of the state. He has served the people remarkably well, and his re-election is a testimony of the high regard and abiding confidence the members of the society have for their president. When the ballot was cast the vote stood as follows:

N. D. Pratt.....	3
A. A. Arnold.....	3
M. H. Moore.....	3
W. H. Wood.....	1
Whole number cast.....	57
Necessary to choose.....	57

Mr. Pratt wanted to decline a re-election for the reason that he had served several years as president and had devoted much time to the duties of the office that should have been spent to the advantage of his private business, but when speeches were showered upon him and his old friends told him in deep earnestness that he must not go, he reluctantly accepted in these words: "Gentlemen, this only exemplifies what I have often heard by my father say; said he: 'I never was my own master, having been married before I was twenty-one.'" Mr. Pratt deserves much praise for sacrificing his own interests that he might give the state agricultural society the benefit of his experience, and his enthusiastic devotion to the cause of agriculture in Wisconsin.

We are also glad to note that Mr. Clinton Babbitt was re-elected secretary. The man who takes that office is compelled not only to do a vast amount of labor, but he must be a man of keen perception, of marked activity, and thoroughly practical in the management of an organization like that of the state agricultural society. Mr. Babbitt has done excellent service, and has not left a single thing undone that would promote the success and the attractiveness of the state fair. Notwithstanding the arduous labor and the great responsibility connected with the office of secretary, there were other candidates for the place, but the balloting resulted as follows:

Clinton Babbitt.....	15
George H. Slaughter.....	12
W. H. Morrissey.....	12
Whole number cast.....	40
Necessary to choose.....	40

The election was made unanimous of course. Mr. Babbitt has done splendidly—has worked hard and done absolutely good work—and therefore this compliment was rightfully due him.

Mr. Cyrus Ainer, who has served the society as treasurer for seven years, did not want a re-election, and stoutly objected to being custodian of the society's funds any longer. But when a thoroughly competent official is connected with such a society, the stockholders, and the people who are more or less brought into business relationship with him, do not like to lose his services, and therefore Mr. Ainer was re-elected by acclamation. He has done enough for the society to entitle him to this handsome recognition.

LONGSTREET'S SURRENDER.

How the Southern Soldier Struck His Colors to Illinois Women.

Woonsocket, Ill., Sept. 15.—The twenty-fourth annual county fair is a great success. The weather is perfect and the crowd immense. Among the veterans is Gen. Longstreet, and he was introduced to the audience at the grand stand. The old white-whiskered, white-haired man, dressed in black broad-cloth, with a boutonniere in his lapel—the man for whom Robert E. Lee always asked when the rebel lines were wavering—stood up. Turning his back on the great gathering across the course, he faced the judges stand, where were Gov. Hamilton and other distinguished men, and said in a low tone:

"Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: I am indebted to the officers of this agricultural society for this honor to-day, and I thank you for it." Then, turning to his audience he said in a voice which failed to reach very far:

"Far away from my southern home I have come to enjoy this occasion. We are here to prepare a way whereby we may become a more homogeneous people. The soldiers of the north and of the south were the first to bring about this blessing of good-will. After the war was over I went to Washington where I visited my old friend and schoolmate, Gen. Grant. He asked me if I was ready to be amnestied, and when I told him yes he gave me a strong letter to President Johnson, and I called on him the next day. After a long talk he put me off until the next day. Then there was another long talk, and finally President Johnson said to me: 'There are three men in this country who can never enjoy the benefits of amnesty—Jeff Davis, R. E. Lee and yourself.' I said to him, after thanking him for placing me in the distinguished company he did: 'Mr. President, those who are forgiven most love you most.' With that I went back to my home in Georgia. A year after a petition for me went up, and Gen. Grant and Gen. Pope went in my behalf in person to see it through, and they did. I felt that I had not loved the Union before as I did then, and again I said, 'Those who are forgiven most love the most.' [Laughter.] I felt the influences of that tender cord which had been touched—by the people of the north—by its women."

Here Gen. Longstreet hesitated and faltered. Turning his back on the audience again he faced the ladies in the judge's stand and, looking at them a few seconds, began in a very low tone: "How can I, a poor soldier, remain in and accustomed to the rough life of camp, express myself while looking into the bright eyes I see. I fail to express—I do not know how to speak—I [The hastiness was becoming painful, and the audience back of him could not divine what he was doing or saying, while those in the stand looked at him steadily.] I—I can only say—in the language of my old commander, 'I must surrender!'"

He sat down at once, a few cheers went up, and as the sun was beating on his white hair a lady offered him her sunshade, which he held above him the remainder of the sitting.

TAR AND FEATHERS.

A Couple of Mormons Get a Coat of the Same.

Bucoville, Ind., Sept. 14.—For several weeks past a couple of Mormons have been in different parts of this county, preaching their creed whenever they could secure the use of a church or schoolhouse. They spent considerable time in the neighborhood of Laurel, and were given accommodations by Mr. D. W. Adams, one of the best citizens of that neighborhood. They left there for other fields, and an 18-year-old daughter of Mr. Adams disappeared from home. Search was instituted, and she was found concealed in a house at Cedar Grove, where the elders were staying. She had been enticed away from her home by one of the elders, and was probably a candidate for Utah. She, however, returned home with her father. Indignation ran high, as the sequel shows. The elders were staying at the residence of Mr. Ellison, a couple of miles from Laurel, and during the night they were called on by about 150 of the best men of that neighborhood. They were forced to undress, and were then given a good coating of tar and feathers. The general opinion is that they were served right.

Fire at Des Moines.

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 15.—Fire destroyed nearly half of the large wooden building used by the Merchants' Union Bank & Wire company. The loss of the building is $3,500 or $3,000. In this portion was the dipping-vault for coating the wire, and about $20,000 worth of plain and manufactured wire, has lost fully half its value by heat and water. The safe and other contents of the office were removed. A small machine shop, working the moonshining machines, was but little damaged, but the machines for barbing and spooling the wire are injured considerably. The total loss is from $15,000 to $18,000, with insurance of $20,000. The custom of the company is to work two shifts of hands daily, and the fire caught from a spool of freshly dipped wire coming in contact with a lighted candle. The company has been in operation for nearly a year, working under a permissive order of the United States circuit court, which allows it to deposit a percentage of the sales during the suit now pending.

Educating the Sioux.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—The United States senate committee on Indian affairs applied to the State "Marry" training school for boys at Freehaven, Ill., some time ago for the admission of Indian children to that institution. The school, which is under the control of the Roman Catholic church, has signified its willingness to accept and train the boys. Deputy Sheriff Burks left the city for Standing Rock agency. He will bring to the school fifty Sioux boys, who are to remain there at the expense of the government.

Will Carry the Banner Again.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—Sergeant G. H. Bates, of Saybrook, Conn., has written to Mayor Harrison that he will be in Chicago Oct. 1. His 14-year-old son Frank will accompany him, and unless forbidden, will unfurl a flag at the city hall at 10 a. m., and begin a pilgrimage with his father to Savannah, Ga., carrying the flag unfurled the whole distance. Sergeant Bates's ambition is "to lay the antagonists engendered by the war." He has made over two thousand public addresses with that view since the war.

Another Good Item Spoiled.

New York, Sept. 15.—Henry E. Abbey arrived from Europe on the City of Rome. He said he had devoted nearly all of his time while abroad to the business of engaging artists for his new opera company. Mary Anderson's success in London was unequivocal, and when he left she was becoming rapidly popular. It was not true that she had declined an introduction to the prince of Wales with the remark that she did not wish to ruin her reputation.

Dakota Constitutional Convention.

Sioux Falls, D. T., Sept. 15.—The Dakota constitutional convention has resolved to take the name of the new state South Dakota, in deference to the protest of the negro meeting. Woman suffrage was rejected 13-36 to 61.

Tore Away His Crutches.

St. Paul, Sept. 15.—A clergyman's testimony. W. E. Gifford, pastor of M. E. church Bothwell, Ont., was for two years a sufferer with dyspepsia in its worst form until he states "life became an actual burden." Three bottles of "Burdock Root Bitters" cured him, and he tells us in a recent letter that he considers it the best family medicine now before the country for dyspepsia and liver complaints. BUSINESS MATTERS.

D&L & Co.'s Review—Failures—J. Gould on Change.

New York, Sept. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co., of the mercantile agency, report that the events of the week do not bear the generally satisfactory prospects for the business of the country. The weather, though somewhat unseasonable, is favorable to the progress of fall trade, especially in dry goods, business in which has been very active during the week, with a large movement of merchandise. Transactions outside New York, as indicated by the bank exchanges, show a considerable increase, with a slight decrease in the city, owing probably to exceptional causes. The rumors as to the damage to the corn crop had the effect of stimulating speculation in that staple and advancing the price. The same remark applies to cotton, which is active and higher. Some improvement is noted in the iron trade, with firmer prices. There is a better feeling in oil, the prices being well supported and business active. The grocery trade is satisfactory. Business at the stock exchange has been large, with a general improvement in the price of securities. Money is plenty, and at low rates. Altogether the situation is more satisfactory, and the prospect for the coming months appears excellent. The business failures, while somewhat numerous, are, with a few exceptions, unimportant.

There were 126 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the past week, six less than the corresponding week of 1882, and 48 more than the same week of 1881. Compared with the previous week, the middle states had 58, an increase of 4; New England states 21, a decrease of 5; southern states 12, a decrease of 1; western states 24, an increase of 6; Pacific states and territories 12, a decrease of 12; Canada and the provinces 14, a decrease of 3.

Mr. Gould has taken unusual measures to publicly identify himself with the present manipulation of the market, and the gradual advance of prices which has been forced during the week is therefore attributed to his operations. His presence in various brokers' offices in the street gives confidence to his following and helped to allay the alarm which was left among the traders at the frost ports.

The Chicago base ball club has dropped to the fourth place in the schedule. Providence held first place.

IN DEAD EARNEST.

A New Aspirant for Pugilistic Honors Challenges Sullivan.

New York, Sept. 15.—William Sheriff, alias "Prussian," the English prize-fighter, who was imported by Arthur Chambers, has thus far been unable to make a match with any of the heavy weights of the ring, although he has gone through the regulation formula of depositing money and issuing challenges. His ambition, like that of all the other prize-fighters, has been to try conclusions with Sullivan.

Sullivan, the French Billiardist, has challenged Sheriff to a game in public, the champion being now able to travel in a palace car, disdained to notice "Prussian's" defiance. Sheriff then proposed to fight for $1,000 a side, in a private room, before not more than twenty spectators, the best man to take the money. The singularity of this challenge caused considerable comment among the fighters and provoked Sullivan to reply. He intimated to Chambers that he did not believe the man meant to "fight," but that if he would put up the $1,000 he would accommodate him. Then Chambers and Sheriff came to this city and deposited the remaining $500 in "Harry" Hill's hands. They say that nothing is left the Boston man now except to fight. The contest, if Sullivan accepts, will take place within two weeks. The man will be governed by the rules of the Marquis of Queensberry, and will be expected to fight until one or the other is beaten.

THE FATAL MISTAKE

In the Protests Expedition---Chances for the Relief of the Greely Party.

WASHINGTON CITY, Sept. 13.—No additional reports have been received either at the war department or navy department from officers of the returned Greely relief expedition at St. John's. It seems to be generally conceded by those who have given the most attention to the subject that the complete and disastrous failure of the relief expedition was mainly due to the omission of Lieut. Garlington, to land his stores and house at Littleton island, or some other point north of Smith's sound, before attempting the hazardous navigation beyond. If he had done this the destruction of the Proteus would have been a comparatively trifling misfortune, and would not necessarily have imperiled the lives of either his crew or the party they were sent north to rescue. Lieut. Garlington and his men could then, after the destruction of their ship, have returned to secure more supplies thus established, and could have carried out the remainder of their plan for the relief of the Lady Franklin bay party by means of a sled expedition up the coast of Grinnell land. As it is now, there is no party at the mouth of Smith's sound to co-operate with Lieut. Greely, and no considerable supply of food there for him to retreat upon. There would seem, however, to be some justification for the course pursued by him in the orders issued to him by Gen. Hazen on the 7th of June, just before he sailed from New York. These orders were in part as follows:

If it is found necessary to retreat, you will retreat from your advanced position and land your party and stores at or near Littleton Cove.

The attention of the acting chief signal officer was called by the Associated Press reporter to this part of Gen. Hazen's original order to Lieut. Garlington, and he was asked whether the particular instructions in question had ever been revoked or modified. He replied that they had, by supplemental orders sent Lieut. Garlington just before the departure of the relief expedition from St. John's last summer. From all information thus far received it would appear that Lieut. Garlington either disregarded or found it impracticable to obey these supplemental orders with regard to landing the house and stores on his way north, since the Proteus was encamped with other stores on board after she had passed the point where the stores should have been landed, and while she was engaged in the extra-hazardous navigation of Smith's sound.

The officers of the signal service here freely admit that the present situation of affairs is serious, but do not regard it in any sense hopeless. They say Lieut. Greely's party's original supply of provisions was calculated to last three years, or until the summer of 1881. This supply, they think, must have been very considerably augmented by the fish and game procurable in the immediate vicinity of Lady Franklin bay station, so that if the party remains there it will not be in danger of starvation before next summer.

Nothing, it is thought, can be done to rescue the unfortunate men this fall. Their lives are now in their own hands and their future depends almost entirely upon their own skill and judgment and upon the chances of the wind and sea. Secretary Lincoln said that the question of how best to get relief to the Greely party had been discussed at the department. He, however, had little hope that anything could be done this year. He thought it would be useless to send a party up this fall. He said, however, if it were shown that relief could be sent the Greely party no expense or pains would be spared to relieve them.

Lieut. Dannebauer, formerly of the Jeannette, and Mr. Tyson, formerly of the Polaris, have expressed their willingness to take part in another Arctic expedition for the relief of Lieut. Greely.

NOVEL LAWSUIT

Growing out of the Friendliness of Two Horses.

New York, Sept. 13.—Dr. Henry E. Whitehorn and William H. Jacobus were neighbors in Verona, Essex county, N. J., and their lots adjoined. Each owned a horse, which was turned out into his lot. The horses were neighborly, and were in the habit of putting their heads over the fence dividing the lots and rubbing noses. In October, 1881, Dr. Whitehorn noticed that his horse was not well. The doctor called in a veterinary surgeon, who pronounced the disease to be glanders, and the animal was therupon killed. A suit growing out of the occurrence came up in the court of common pleas at Newark, Dr. Whitehorn suing Mr. Jacobus to recover the value of his horse, the charges of the veterinary surgeon, the cost of the medicine used, and the expense of the loss of a horse during the sickness of the glandered horse, claiming that his horse contracted the glanders while rubbing noses with Mr. Jacobus' horse. The counsel for Jacobus moved a non-suit on the ground that there was no proof of knowledge on the part of his client that his horse had the glanders. The motion was denied.

From Sea to Sea.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 13.—A train of ten cars, loaded with corn, was started from this city for Portland, Oregon. The cars are loaded with corn raised and canned in this vicinity, and conspicuously lettered so as to attract attention at all points on the route. A special test schedule has been arranged, and the train is expected to reach Chicago in four days, and will then move without delay via St. Paul and the Northern Pacific railway. It is understood that President Villard intends making the arrival at Portland the occasion of a demonstration.

Chicago and the Saloons.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—The city law department will defend the $100 saloon license whenever the proceedings attacking its validity come to an issue in the courts, but has not heard of any new move or plan of the Citizens' League or its attorneys to bring about a speedy settlement of the questions in dispute. "I considered the $100 ordinance legal when the council passed it," said Corporation Counsel Francis Adams, "and I see no reason for changing my opinion."

Dashed His Brains Out.

ZARZESKI, O., Sept. 13.—Isaac Stuy, a well-to-do farmer, living two miles south of town, was accidentally killed in attempting to shake a squirrel from a small tree on his farm. While standing on a limb without a handhold his feet slipped and caught in the fork of the tree, throwing the body downward and dashed his brains out against the trunk of the tree. He was about 80 years old.

Will it Draw a Prize?

New York, Sept. 13.—Some one dropped a Hawaiian lottery ticket in the box in the south part of the postoffice as a contribution to the Peter Cooper monument fund. Bills, checks, postage stamps and stamped envelopes, silver and copper coins, some of which are counterfeit, nearly fill the box.

Miss Hattie Lappin has recently exhibited some excellent pieces in oil, and among them are two large panels—one a hollyhock and the other a sunflower.

The hollyhock is a most attractive piece, the coloring being strikingly natural.

But among the best work that Miss Hattie has done this season, are the decorations on a marble mantel at her own home. On the white marble she has painted a vine with wild flowers and birds. The graceful streaming of the vine, and the judicious coloring of the flowers, make a very happy combination, and do much credit to the young artist.

She is becoming quite prolific with the brush, giving the subject untiring patience and thorough study, and in doing much she does not forget to do it well.
